Demonstrations for 3 Months. Planned by Extension Service.

Canning Schools to Be Held at Middlebury College and State Normal Schools in Johnson and Castleton Like One Here.

Schools of canning at Middlebury, Johnson and Castleton, and canning demon-strations to occupy three months, are announced by Dean J. L. Hills of the State university College of Agriculture. The schools will be conducted by the agricul-tural extension service in co-operation with Middlebury College and the two State Normal schools and will last for about a week. The latter schools will be opened probably next week, with Miss Charlotte C. Pierpont in charge at Castle-ton and Miss Bertha M. Holden at Johnson. The one is assistant to State Club Leader E. L. Ingalls and the other instructor in home economics in the service. Both are new additions to the staff. The school at Middlebury will be opened within two or three weeks.

The three schools will be conducted on about the same lines as the one at Morrill hall, with lectures, demonstrations in the canning of soups, meats, vegetables and

DEMONSTRATIONS OVER STATE

The demonstration work throughout the State has been in contemplation for some time. It will be conducted by at least four and possibly seven members of the extension service staff, who will each be assigned a certain number of communities or towns to cover. Lectures on canning have been features of the courses given by the service from time to time, but the demonstration work will be new and on a agents in each of the ten counties will by giving the demonstrations publicity, rousing interest and so on. But the work will not be confined necessarily to the ten counties where the agents

AGENTS FOR LAMOILLE.

Lamoille will be the next county to have a county agricultural agent, and one may be appointed before very long. Grand Isle county is expected to combine with Chit-tenden or Franklin county or both, in the support of an agent. There is a State law which permits such action, and a few towns of Essex county have united with Orleans and Caledonia counties, as their location makes convenient. Neither Grand Isle nor Essex county is likely to have an agent of its own for some come, because of the sparse population.

The whole flight lasted seven hours, during which the daring French aviator was guided only by the moon and stars and the compass, as the voyage was made in the darkest hours of the night, the destination being reached exactly according to plan. Sergeant Gallois narrated his story in the simplest manner. He said: "Four of us-Lieutenant Ardisson de Perdiguier, Sergeant Durand, another comrade, and myself-left our base at nightfall Friday, with the intention of reaching Essen. Soon afterward we ran into foggy weather, and lost sight of each other. I flew at an altitude of 1,200 meters, and passed over Metz and Thionville, fol-

"The batteries fired at me crossing the Rhine, and as I passed over Mets searchlights played about the sky. At Thionville I heard another airplane nearby, but I was compelled to travel by the aid of the compass, the stars, and the moon.
"At Treves I saw a heavy bombardment, which I calculated was directed at my comrade. Therefore I knew I was traveling in the right direction. I did not see Coblens. I saw the reflec-tion of the moon on the Rhine and found Bonn. From there to Dusseldorf there was a regular sea electricity, which increased as I got further north. "I was thoroughly exhausted and was suffering from my eyes, which were af-fected by the strain and wind, as I had fected by the strain and wind, as I had lost both pairs of goggles at the start, and was often obliged to put my head outside in order to see the director. When nearing the base, owing to the darkness I could not tell exactly where I was. I thought possibly I was still over the German lines and decided to continue westward as long as the petrol lasted. I had a few litres left and was driving onward, when suddenly I recognized a pre-arranged signal and managed to land just at dawn at the same place from which I had departed. The distance covered was 750 kilometers (about 45%, miles),"
